Heather Rumble Peterson's extensive market-leading experience in class actions, including price-fixing, mass torts and product liability, as well as her broad-based experience in negligence, medical malpractice and commercial litigation, make her a notable figure. But it is her ability to make rigour reliable which helps explain Heather's considerable success. This success includes some of Canada's largest class action settlements.

For more than two decades, Heather has provided supervision and oversight to the Hepatitis C Class Action Settlement claims process, which has distributed over $1 billion to more than 14,000 infected Canadians and their families. Heather has also been appointed by the Ontario Court to administer the distribution of settlement proceeds in other class actions.

With a passion for making things work, Heather also serves as president and chair of the board of a regional women's organisation, on the leadership team of a national and an international women's organisation, on the board of a national relief and missions agency, and as a member of a global ethics commission.
